"I always knew I wanted to travel and study abroad but I was not sure where. I learned about Perrotis College at the American Farm School in Greece having an internship program for students so I figured this would be a nice balance of work and fun. To be honest I was not sure what I was getting myself into. I was the only intern from Virginia Tech and did not know the other interns when I arrived, but little did I know the amazing memories I would make with them. All the other interns went to schools in the United States and they all shared the desire to explore with me. Greece is a beautiful country with amazing history that left me in awe. During the week I would work during the day and take a class about Greek history and culture. I learned relevant skills while working in a unique environment. During the weekends we travelled to different parts of Greece and Europe. I explored beaches, ancient ruins, climbed Mt. Olympus, took a 4 day sailing trip, explored the nightlife, and much more. Would I do it again? Of course. My advice to anyone thinking about studying or interning abroad is to do it while we are still in college and have the time. Do something out of your comfort zone, because when you do you'll make memories that will last a lifetime."
